A DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT.

The cautata, "The Meeting of the Nations," closed the program of the even-line in the year with Superintendent Alien, the facuity and students of the growment Indian school in this city, the occasion being the closing exercises of the school for the year 1899. There was universal and boundless rejoicing in the previation of the Indian school last fall and winter when the football team of the school demonstrated the physical superiority of the trained Indian over the Caucasian on the gridiron and won the championship of New Mexico, and held its against all comers. But the satisfaction felt last high was of a deeper nature, for the exercises of the day gave the most ampie proof of the intellectual attainments of the children of the red man, under the wise guidance of government schools.

In the afternoon, a number of people from the city accepted the invitation, a cortising given, to come to the school and for a few hours witness the regular routine work in the different class rooms. Afterward they inspected collected explay—manual training, drawing, the work in physiology, history, composition, paoning, the work of scholars, which were framed with frames that had been made by the artists themselves. Was in store for them, and placed them in an attitude of close attention. Epifanto Lobato recited an essay, "How I Saw the Ocean." It turned out that he was only describing the excursion of a small drop of water starting from the top of the Rocky mountains in Yellow-stone Park, and ultimately finding its way to the ocean via the Missouri and Mississippi rivers and the Gulf of Mexico, and returning by means of evaporation and rains to the point of beginning in the Yellowstone Park. So naturally was the whole journey described that until the closing sentences no one doubted that the personal experience of the little Indian boy standing before them was being described.

"The June Bug Dance," played on the piano by Natividad Gutierrez, Alice Marmon, May Morris and Josephine Montoya, was a fine effort and evoked much applause.

Miss Kupalia Lobato recited "One of the Little Ones" with a clear enunciation and good expression.

Probably the hit of the evening came next, when ten little Indian boys, and their chief, adorned with war paint and feathers, dressed in red jackets, which were ornamented with beads and narrow black stripes, blue knee pants and white leggings, and armed with hatchets, gave a drill, while singing "Ten Little Indians." It is safe to say that never before had any of the visitors had a clearer realization of the significance of that favorite little song. The boys who took part were pure-blooded Indians and of very nearly the same size.

Beforehand, the ladies of the St. John's Beforehand, the ladies of the St. John's Guild, in charge of Mrs. H. J. Emerson, had appropriately decorated the church with flowers, ferns and evergreen, while H. B. Holmes, a young gentieman from Chicago, who officiated as master of ceremonies, had skillfully drillied the ushers, the little misses and others of the wed-with ding party in the parts assigned them.

Thus there was no hitch in the pretty ed uno proceedings.

At 8 o'clock, with Prof. Di Mauro as violinist and Miss Hanthorne on the organ, the beautiful Mendelsohn wedding march was commenced, and soon thereafter the lovely bride, on the arm of her father, entered the church, and led by the ushers—Maynard Harding, Walter Francis, Robert Kuhns and Burt Baker, and Miss Lottie McCoy, as maid of honor -marched down the aiste between lines of pure white ribbon, held on each side by five pretty little girls, to the aitar, where the groom, with the best man, Andrew O'Hara, stood ready to receive her.
